WHAT TO FEED YOUR PARROT

Parrots should not be fed just seed. Like us, they need a wide variety of food for proper health. The list below should be used as a guide because as you know, a parrot can be as small as a budgie or as big as Max the Macaw. Always provide a wide range of food but in small quantities. For example, grapes are safe for birds providing you do not feed them too much. A quarter of a grape is enough for a budgie but a cockatoo could eat a few grapes.

We have found that parrots accept eating veggies more easily if they are cooked (or half cooked), so when you have prepared some for tea, take a bit off and when cooled down, give to your bird. If you are having trouble getting your bird to eat veggies, pop in and we can give you some tips.

The Good	The Bad
Apples	Avocado
Alfalfa	Onion
Peas	Rhubarb
Corn	Potatoes
Bok Choy	Lettuce (iceberg)
Broccoli	Tomatoes
Carrots	Any foods containing a lot of starch
Cauliflower	Dairy products
Celery
Strawberries
Cherries
Nectarine
Peach
Banana
Grapes
Raw nuts
Green Beans
Cucumber
Silver beet (very good)
Snow peas

Avocado is an absolute NO. Never ever feed you parrot this as it will almost certainly kill them. If you have any questions about your pet bird, contact our well trained staff.
